

WALKERGEORGE FILMS

Set up by filmmakers Stephen Walker and Sally George in 2006, Walker George Films is a production company dedicated to making the sort of high-quality factual programming – documentaries and drama documentaries - which have won Stephen and Sally widespread critical praise and popular appeal over many years of filmmaking for the BBC and Channel Four.

Walker George Films' first film, Young@Heart, a feature-length musical documentary about an American chorus of pensioners who sing rock 'n' roll, was directed by Stephen and broadcast on More Four and Channel Four in November, 2006. The film was critically acclaimed and picked by both Time Out and the Radio Times as the best documentary of 2006.

Other projects in production include Silver Surfers, a film about old-age internet dating for Simon Dickson at Channel Four (directed by Ursula MacFarlane) and The Magnificent Stobbo, a film about a musical prodigy at Eton who suffers from cystic fibrosis (directed by Stephen Walker, also for Simon Dickson).